Warning is issued to fruit growers of Connecticut by Profesors S. P. Hollister of the Pomology Department at Connecticut Agricultural College, to the effect that thousands of fruit trees will be lost unless prompt action is taken to repair winter damage from mice and rabbits.

Because of the heavy snow, mice and rabbits have been forced to live largely upon the bark of trees. In many orchards the damage is very great and some frees are probably injured beyond repair. Unless completely girdled, however trees may be saved by the process known as "bridge-graftling." POSTMASTER AT PACKER
IS ORIGINAL CHARACTER

(Special to The Bulletin.) (Special to The Builetin.)

Packer, Conn., March 25.—"Tommy"
Brown, as Postmaster Thomas Brown of this place is called by every one who knows him, both old and young, is perhaps one of the most original characters in his way in Connecticut. To start with. "Tommy" ran away from home when a boy, and enlisted in the First U. S. Heavy Artillery, served through the last days of the war, re-enlisted and took part in the Fenian up-rising on the Maine border, and then returned home and went to work. Early in his career as a Grand Army member, the thought struck him that there were many soldlers in all parts of Connecticut, buried in unmarked graves, so he started in looking them up. He has visited nearly a hundred cemeteries, digging up records that have enabled him to erect more than 360 headstones over un-marked, abandoned soldlers' graves and has in the past few years received requests to secure grave-stones from as far away as California and one call from Honolulu. Twenty years ago he became postmaster here, succeeding his son. He is a brother of W. H. Brown, the first postmaster of Packer, who was also postmaster at Versailles and Jewett City. Nine relatives of his, direct and by marriage have been postmasters in near-by places. So correct has he been in his accounts, that he never saw an inspector at one time in six years.

A rickety Rockingchair sawyed to and fro
In front of a Secondhand Store;
You could tell it was sad, for it wearily sighed:
"This I never have done before;
I once was a dweller in Well-to-de Street,
But when I grew wabbly and old
They put me out back of the kitchen and then—
Ah, then I was bartered and sold."

"I thought I knew you," the Baby's Chair said.
"You once were a neighbor of mine.
My babiss grew up and—well, you understand—
What else sould I do but resign?"
The Kitchen Stove laughed as old Pitcher and Bewl
Exclaimed: "We're the victime of Fate—
We, too, were discharged by neighbors of yours;
Antiques that are called out of date!"

SATURDAY FRIDAY

Our 47th Anniversary Celebration will continue Friday and Saturday, with complete assortments of Anniversary Offerings. Every department in the store is represented amongst the Anniversary Offerings which comprise the newest and most staple kinds of Spring merchandise.

To recount the years from the time we opened as a small dry goods store at 93 Main street, is a real history in itself, closely linked with the growth and ideals of Eastern Connecticut. It is a record of 47 years of achievement, founded on a substantial three-fold policy of Progress, Service and Integrity.

It recalls the many successive steps of progress in additions and improvements, resulting in this great store as it stands today, and a recognized leadership in advanced ideas in merchandising and service to the community, whereby this store has come to be known as the leading Department Store in Eastern Connecti-
